

Binding Progress by Aaron Kentros

You are the right tool living during the right time, yet your selfishness is preventing the progress of all mankind. When you gaze upon your mirrors reflection, I am sure a feeling of accomplishment surges through the refracted avarice. Accountability has no meaning to you; in truth, you continuously delegate responsibility that has world impact, to your least educated subordinates as the world slips further into conflict. When you peer out the windows of your mansions' opulence, can you even see through the clouds of your deception? How long did you think your camouflage would conceal young people from inspiration, or the old to purchase bottled success? Train me, inspire me, motivate me or these chains of ignorance will forever bind me.