

Temporary Mortality

The vampire couldn't draw any blood so I told her to try the other arm. That worked. A couple of viles and a specimen cup and that was that. Until the next time. Low circulation. Not enough coffee. Haha. When she asked which arm to draw from, I should've said, "Ya want medium or dark roast?". Ha. That would've confused her. Probably not a good idea to mess with someone holding a sharp object (a needle, no less). I imagined that when they take the viles back to the lab, they really only need a drop or two to put in the machine that analyses it. The rest they probably pour into a shot glass and raise a toast to whichever demonic power they serve.